

Are You Doing Amphibian and Reptile Outreach?

North Carolina's Partners in Amphibian and Reptile Conservation (NCPARC) is putting together a list of available individuals and facilities that currently provide reptile or amphibian programs as education and outreach tools for the public. With this list, NCPARC representatives would be able to provide a contact name and number for an individual or facility close to the requestor, should someone from anywhere in the state contact NCPARC seeking a speaker or program about herps. This would improve our state's ability to get the word out about the species of amphibians and reptiles that occur in NC, their biology, and/or ways we can all work together to improve their conservation.

If you would like to be added to this contact list, please send your information to Jeff Hall, Commission Herpetologist, at jeff.g.hall@earthlink.net. You may also register by visiting the NCPARC website, www.ncparc.org, and clicking on "Education and Outreach." Please provide your name, organization/affiliation, phone #, email address, coverage area (ex. Wake County) and what type of programs you provide. If you have any questions or you would like to become involved in NCPARC (membership is free and open to everyone) you may contact Sarah via email or through the website.

Thanks for your response and for your efforts toward the conservation of our state's amphibians and reptiles!
